

With your fatherly blessing, Lord, strengthen these servants of yours in their resolve to dedicate themselves as catechists. Grant that they may be able to teach that they themselves derive from pondering your word and studying the church's teaching. And let them gladly join those they teach in honoring and serving your name, We ask this through Christ our Lord.

Catechetical Sunday

Parents are truly the primary catechists of their children.

They prepare the soil and plant the first seeds of faith. On Catechetical Sunday, we not only highlight the work of catechists in parishes and schools, but we also commend parents and guardians and encourage them to take seriously their role of making their Catholic households a place where faith is passed on to the next generation.

ALL ARE WELCOME! A MEMBER OF BLESSED TERESA OF CALCUTTA DEANERY

Dear People of God,

At a recent Holy Smokes gathering, I was asked how the Bible we take for granted today ever came into being. [Yes, there's a lot of religion discussed at this periodic event]. It's a complicated subject since we read from both the Old and New Testaments but think of it as one Bible when it's actually two. Let's begin by saying that both began as stories told by people to other people about important truths vital to their religious beliefs, traditions and practices. Many of the stories in the Old Testament, especially Genesis, pre-date the invention of writing so remained retold stories for long centuries, perhaps two or three thousand years before any of them made their way to papyrus (plant fiber), vellum (animal skin) or parchment (calf skin). After the Resurrection/Ascension of Jesus, plenty of eyewitnesses could share what they saw and heard so nobody thought it necessary to take notes which could be assembled as the New Testament. These are what scholars refer to as oral stories. Let's look first at how these came to be included in what we now know as the Old Testament.

Several different kinds of oral stories circulated before the introduction of writing. Many were speculative guesses at how or why things were as they were since the origin of those things or behaviors were so ancient that nobody was around to jot them down with a piece of half-burnt stick on a cave wall. The most obvious of these are the creation stories: How did all of what we can see, hear, taste, smell and feel come to be and, far more important, how did we get here? During the later editing phase when the Bible was being written, two very different creation stories were included. You can find them in the first couple of chapters of Genesis. We'll look at why that discordant duplication exists, but let's first note that there are other kinds of oral stories including family origin stories like Abram being called out of Ur of the Chaldees (which also answers a question: How did we wind up here when all our relatives are over in Ur of the Chaldees?) or the story of the Twelve Tribes as the sons of Jacob prospered and grew. History as the ancients understood it would include things like the story of Joseph getting to Egypt and Moses getting everybody back out 400 years later. There were songs and poetry, which we know as the Psalms. All of this began as stories or songs or poems shared among the people, and just about every pre-historic group had them. Note that almost all of these stories were answers to questions; such questions were asked by someone who wanted to spark that evening's fireside stories since story-telling was the "social media" of the prehistoric era.

For the people of Israel, the stories centered on God's creative genius and the place of humanity within that creation. Again, we can easily see that the stories were a response to questions raised by the people; such questions likely included "Why are people so mean to each other?" (the Cain and Able story), "Why couldn't I understand that visitor the other day?" (the Tower of Babel) "What are all these old bones buried under the ground?" (the Flood). Because these questions are fairly typical of any emerging civilization, similar stories were also being circulated among neighboring peoples. Ancient migrations exposed groups of people to the stories of other groups and inspired some sharing and even incorporation of those which seemed more accurate or which offered a more exciting rendition of the answer to a question. (Compare the Genesis story of Noah to the flood story of Gilgamesh whose roots are in the same neighborhood as Abraham). Oral stories were informative and entertaining but clearly flexible given their origin, their location and the influence of adjacent peoples.

This week, consider thinking about and enjoying the oral stories told in your family.

Fr Chris

THIS WEEK ON FORMED

Week of September 17, 2023

Padre Pio: Miracle Man

This movie captures the Capuchin friar's intense faith, devotion, and deep spiritual concern for others, as well as his great compassion for the sick and suffering. It reveals the amazing details and events in Padre Pio's life as a boy and throughout his fifty years as a friar, dramatizing the frequent attacks from the devil, as well as the persecution he suffered at the hands of people, including those in the Church.

The Calling of Matthew

Dr. Tim Gray provides an extended analysis of Caravaggio's The Calling of St. Matthew.

The Reluctant Saint: The Story of St. Joseph Cupertino

This film portrays the life of St. Joseph of Cupertino, the humble Franciscan friar who literally rose to sainthood. In the impoverished village of seventeenth century Cupertino, Italy, Joseph's peasant mother convinces the reluctant abbot to accept her son into the monastery. With the support of the kindly local bishop who sees in him a great deal more than others do, and by a series of miraculous incidents, the simple but pious Joseph is ordained a priest.
